COMMENTS ON SPORTS

By Pete Fritchie

By Pete Fritchie
Washington, D. C- As for as the pennant races themselves are concerned, this has been a great year for major leagues. The National League race has been more intersting, since more teams have been involved.
The surprise team from the start has been Cincinnati. Fred Hutchinson's lads have led most of the way. It is only in the last few weeks, of course, that the Los Angles, Dodgers have gotten into the act, and despite their losing streak they still have a chance.
The San Francisco Giants, who were thought to be out of it long ago, came on with a roar a short time back and might hve a chance after all. Even the Milwaukee Braves, which shou'l have won the pennant this year, made noises in late August but squandered opportunities earlier in the year probably rule them out.
In the senior major league they, there has been great interest this year - in the flag race - because all was not going smooth in the script, which said the Pittsburgh Pirates would repeat.
The American League race has been made exciting by one team- Detroit, Baltimore did it in 1960 and foiled the last crucial series with New York. Detroit is not likely to fold against the Bombers. They have a tradition of beating the Yankees.
Baltimore has a good team again this year. They might just be the team to beat New York and that would be an irony of fate, because they play two series with the New Yorkers in September. With the great pitching he now has going, Paul Richards should be able to make it touch for the Yanks. He might even be able to get even for the humiliation of last year when the Yankees applied the ax to the Orioles in typical Yankee style.

Chairman William A. Hunter asks that you please send your special donations to either Mrs. Jean Leonard at the Bank of Appomattox, or to him at the Farmers National Bank.

DAIRY COWS SUFFER FROM HOT WEATHER, TOO

Help your dairy cows beat the heat--and they'll pay off in higher production.
Dr. M. F. Ellmore, dairy specialist at Virginia Polytechnic Institute says cows and humans may get hot in different ways for different reasons, But they can cool in some of the same ways.
Som of the heat may come from the atmosphere, but the problem really arises within the cow's body. Much heat is produced in the cow's digestion process. During cold weather some of the heat can be used to help keep her warm. During the summer the heat is not needed for this purpose and must be dissipated.
cows get rid of this non-productHow can the dairyman help ive heat?
Dr. Ellmore says to provide plenty of clean fresh water close to shade. Be sure the shade is where air circulates freely. Feed the cow a ration that is easily digested, one that produces the minimum of "heat of digestion." Corn and other grains are high energy feeds, but most of the energy can be used for production Therefore, a minimum of the energy is dissipated as heat throughout digestion. Forages are harder to digest and increase the heat of digestion. So consider supplementing scanty forage with an easily digested concentrate instead of with large amounts of dry forage.
Milk production tends to drop when the weather is hot. Dr. Ellmore says there are probably many reasons. Not enough water, poor pasture, animal too sluggish to walk far for water or feed, are some of the possible reasons the dairyman can help with the cow to minimize the mid-summer slump in production.

URGES INNOCULATION AGAINST INFLUENZA

Dr. Mack H Shanholtz, State Health Commissioner urged the citizens of Virginia today to obtain innoculation against Influenza as soon as possible, and immediate vaccination for persons for whom influenza would be an additional health risk — the aged, those chronically ill with heart disease, pulmonary illness, or diabetes, and pregnant women.
"Because of the cyclical nature of influenza we would be remiss not to anticipate an outbreak of the Asian and B types of flu this year. Both types have been dormant for a number of years. Such outbreaks in this country have been preceded by outbreaks abroad the previous year, and Europe was hard hit by Asian and B type Flu in 1960 "Dr. Shanholtz stated.
There are ample supplies of the polyvalent type of influenza vaccine, which contains immuniring material against the important types of influenza, including Asian and B strains. Dr. Shanholtz emphasized that once flu strikes a community, it is too late to protect the high risk groups. Vaccination now, ahead of the flu season is the only safeguard.
He continued "It is fatal to so many people who, in spite of their age or chronic impairments, could otherwise enjoy many more years of relatively good health that it is imperative these person take this simple precaution of vaccination."
Dr. Shanholtz concluded by stating that the U. S. Public Health Service is urging state welfare agencies to include flu immunization in the medical care provided by public assistance programs.
